‘Ban on traveller camps is safeguarding citizens’

Council leader defends decision to extend controversial injunction until 2020

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

THE leader of Harlow Council said a renewed injunction to ban unauthorised traveller sites has residents’ “best interests at heart”.

Councillor Jon Clempner, part of the ruling Labour group, was dubbed “the most hated man in Harlow” after pushing for the injunction, but said the move was never an attack on travellers.

This week he helped secure a renewed court deal giving authorities the power to move on travellers from unauthorised sites until June 14, 2020.

He said: “In the 18-month period (before the injunction was granted in December 2015) we had more than 100 unauthorised encampments.

“Harlow is a small area and it had a massive impact on the community.

Problem

“Once we had to close a special school (because of disruption caused by encampments) and it was a big problem.

“There have been nine in the 18 months after that and all of those were moved on very quickly. It has been very successful and the judge recognised that.”

The renewed injunction stops 40 named people from setting up encampments on any land in Harlow and protects 322 vulnerable sites.

The former Comet site has been one of the most problematic in the time the injunction has been active and has been added to the list of protected places along with five extra names.

Mr Clempner said three years is “a long time” for a temporary injunction, even though the council had been pushing for four more years.

He added: “The council has asked the Government for a change in law for the powers to do the job properly. That has not happened yet.

“We will continue to pressure the Home Office.

“There needs to be wider provision for the county as a whole for permanent traveller sites. Harlow has done its bit, we have two permanent sites for travellers.”

“It was never about targeting travellers,” he added. “We will do what is needed to safeguard Harlow citizens.

“A traveller group was unhappy about it but in the three occasions we were in court no one contested the injunction.

“They were not happy but I would not describe it as a backlash.

“I would not put it in political terms. There were some people who (in 2015) wanted to make a political point.

“People were offensive. It took political courage and leadership to drive that through and not everybody was happy about that.

Uneasy

“Some of our partners were uneasy. We had to have some frank exchanges of views with Essex County Council.

“This has Harlow’s best interests at heart. In the 18 months I have had personal abuse and got called the most hated man in Harlow.

“I have had to let a lot of that slide over me and do what’s right for Harlow.”

Harlow’s geography and the number of green spaces in the town made it a target, according to the council leader, which was why the authority was the first to act but other towns could follow.

Mr Clempner said: “A lot of other authorities are considering it. It is clear there are areas where the same individuals are moving around.”

Breaching the injunction is an offence that could lead to a custodial sentence.

Shoppers stand outside the Harvey Centre during the security alert

Alert after suspicious package found in toilet

THE Harvey Centre was evacuated when a suspect package was found inside the men's toilets.

Hundreds of shoppers and retailers were marched out of the popular Harlow mall by security staff and waited outside for around 45 minutes on Tuesday.

Residents were told the evacuation was not a drill and Essex Police attended the scene but the package was found to not be harmful.

A spokesman from the Harvey Centre said: "The police were called immediately to deal with the matter. The package was not hazardous and the centre is now open and running as usual."

An Essex Police spokesman added: "Officers attended and determined it was not a suspicious device and there is no risk to the public."

Retail staff knew little about why they had been evacuated but were mostly not alarmed when told to drop everything and move outside.

George Simm, manager of women's clothes shop Georgi, said: "Security asked everyone to go outside. They did not say anything else."

"I went and stood outside. I was there between 20 minutes and half an hour."

Jon Richens, an employee of PC Fix, added: "We went outside and it was like any other fire drill. After 20 minutes some began to feel a bit nervous but it was never a fear."

Tom Pead, who works for Marquee Models, said: "A Harvey Centre employee stuck their head in and said this is not a drill. Everyone walked outside."

"I have to say I was a little nervous but everyone was laughing and joking, in good spirits."

Dealer caught in drugs den 'playing with baby'

Baker jailed for three and a half years after police raid

By Conor Gogarty
star@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A BAKER has been jailed for running a Class A drugs operation in Harlow, despite claiming he was just playing with a baby when police found him in a room strewn with over £1,000 worth of heroin and crack cocaine.

Ishmail Kelly, 24, and from Camberwell, was sentenced to three years and six months in prison at Chelmsford Crown Court on Friday June 9, after a two-day Chelmsford Crown Court trial in which he was found to have possessed heroin and crack cocaine with intent to supply.

Police raided a house in Longfield on January 12 and entered a room rented by the defendant's cousin, Ajaun Riley, who pleaded guilty to the same charges brought against Kelly, an employee of Tasty Bakery in Catford.

PC Gary Spinks and DC Jake Eth-

Chelmsford Crown Court

eridge found Riley bagging up drugs on a bed, where Kelly was also sitting with five wraps of heroin and one of crack cocaine in his pocket.

In total, the room contained 96 wraps of crack cocaine and 24 of heroin, altogether weighing just over 11 grams and valued at over £1,000.

A woman and a girl aged around one were also present in the room, where £1,620 in cash was found. Kelly claimed he did not know the woman or the parents of the baby.

During his trial, Kelly told the court he did not see any drugs despite sitting on a bed covered in crack cocaine rocks which were being wrapped up by his cousin.

Playing

He said: "It was of no interest to me. I was on the phone and playing with the baby."

The defendant claimed he put the wraps of Class As in his pocket because the baby had reached out to grab them.

When asked in his police interview why he was concerned about the child touching the wraps if he did not know what they were, Kelly said: "I didn't want the baby putting something in its mouth."

Anger online at condition of horses prompts an RSCPA visit

Inspection after web images went viral

By William Mata

william.mata@hertssexnews.co.uk

THE RSPCA has taken action after shocking images of poorly horses on Harlow Common were widely seen on social media.

An ill and malnourished mare and foal were seen struggling in the heat last week, prompting cries for authorities to help.

This latest incident follows more than 6,000 signing a petition to "stop inhumane treatment of equestrian on common land" and the RSPCA and Harlow Council expressing concern.

A 38-year-old Harlow woman, who did not wish to be named, put the pictures on Facebook group Spotted in Harlow to raise awareness and her post was shared 500 times.

She said: "The mare was emaciated and the foal had diarrhoea. The same person owned both of them. The RSPCA came out and saw them both. It has been sorted out now."

She added: "I have reported (ill-looking horses) to the RSPCA on a number of occasions. It happens every year."

Graphic

Earlier this year a graphic image of a horse lying dead in Pinnacles, Harlow, provoked a similar online response as calls continue for more action.

Emma Spicer, of Cheshunt, said: "They are up by the Harlow grass verges. They are so thin and underweight, they are stumbling around and have matted hair."

"This is a shocking disgrace."

The RSPCA (Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) responded to this latest incident by sending an inspector round on Sunday, June 11.

The horse's owner was advised by a vet to provide treatment and to call for help if the animal's condition did not improve.

A spokesman from the charity said: "We are aware of concerns for horses on Harlow Common and we have been working with the police and other welfare charities. The RSPCA takes all complaints about animal welfare seriously and where possible try to work with owners to make life better for animals."

"We are really grateful to those who are concerned for the welfare of these horses, and take the time to contact us."

Tilly is in need of a good home

Partially-sighted pet needs home

A PARTIALLY-SIGHTED cat is in need of a home, having spent a long time in foster care.

Cats Protection Harlow, Epping Forest and District has appealed for readers to consider taking in year-old feline Tilly.

A spokesman from the charity said: "This gorgeous girl and is lively and affectionate, loving to play with her toys.

"She was born with an eye defect, which means she is partially-sighted but to live life to the full she needs to be able to go outdoors in a secure enclosed garden, or in a catio.

"Cats Protection do not want this lovely lady to be confined indoors, so if you think you can offer the right home to Tilly, or just to find out more about her without obligation, do get in touch."

Tilly is spayed and fully vaccinated.

No jail for dad over sex images of children

Married man was 'exploring his sexuality'

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsexnews.co.uk

A HARLOW man who admitted possessing indecent images of children avoided jail after he said he was just "exploring his sexuality".

Christian Gadd, 45, of Lawrence Moorings, Harlow, previously pleaded guilty to three indictments - making three category A images, three category B images and seven category C images.

Laptop

All the incriminating material was found on Gadd's laptop, taken by police after a search on August 22 last year.

Chelmsford Crown Court heard last Wednesday, June 14, that Gadd, a married father, had claimed he only intended to look at adult pornography and was "exploring his sexuality".

Miles Trigg, prosecuting, told the court: "There were images of pornographic nature.

"He denied accessing indecent images but did concede he was using his laptop to view pornography."

A thorough analysis of his laptop found Gadd had entered 'teen' as a search term, but the court heard he said he only intended to see images of people aged 18 and over.

A lengthy discussion followed as to how the images were found on Gadd's computer if he had not taken steps to save them or download them.

It was decided the images had popped-up as separate links from pornography websites Gadd was viewing.

Peter Hunter, mitigating on behalf of Gadd, said: "All 13 pop-ups have come up on screen and he has clicked them, but there is no evidence to show he has viewed them ever again.

"He has lost his job and is working to save his marriage.

"He was exploring his sexuality. He also used sites that did not require specialist software.

"I suggest there is no possibility of re-offending."

Recorder William Clegg said: "This is a rare case where the making of category A indecent images is not met by a prison sentence.

"However, there are facts of this case that have persuaded me to follow the recommendation of the social inquiry report.

Not saved

"I take into account there are few images and they have not been saved.

"I accept that they were viewed as a result of being re-directed from the sites where he was viewing pornography."

The judge issued an 18 month community order and 200 hours of unpaid work.

If he fails to comply he could be back in court and sent to prison.

Gadd re-signed the Sex Offenders Register and will pay a victim surcharge.

Dodgy diesel is enough to bring vehicles to halt

Tesco: We'll cover costs of breakdowns

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsexnews.co.uk

TESCO has apologised to Harlow motorists who filled up with dodgy diesel and had to pay for repairs.

Drivers reported their cars losing power and breaking down after stopping at the supermarket's fuel station in Church Langley Way, Harlow, at the end of May.

Complainants were initially angry at the retail giant, but Tesco has now agreed to cover costs of repairs, which for some motorists amounted to more than £2,000.

In February last year customers reported having to fork out for repairs after filling up at the Church Langley branch, but that time Tesco found no problems with the fuel.

Harlow resident Wanda Owen said: "When I entered the forecourt (on May 25) there was a handwritten note saying several pumps were closed for diesel."

"I found an open pump and filled up. As I left my car lost power and went into limp mode. I got to the nearest garage who confirmed it was a fuel issue."

Ms Owen's car was towed to a garage in Waltham Cross who removed, drained and cleaned the fuel tank at a cost of £2,000.

She was left without a car for two weeks while it was being repaired. Tesco initially told some customers there was not a problem with the fuel.

Compensate

After hearing Tesco had agreed to compensate, she added: "Tesco telephoned me and agreed there was a problem on the day."

"They asked for all invoices and receipts to be sent to them and they would contact us with a settlement offer."

"We feel badly treated as Tesco first dismissed our claims and denied there was a problem."

Gina Kleinhans, 38, of Rushton Grove, Harlow, filled up on Friday, May 26, and needed to pay £700 for a new fuel injector and fuel filter after her car broke down shortly after.

After the incident, she said:

"I'm angry because they haven't admitted liability when the same thing has happened to lots of people who used the garage on the same day."

"They fobbed me off with saying they tested the fuel but I've no way of knowing if it was the fuel that was put into my car as they never asked for a sample of it. It was too much of a coincidence for this to happen to at least ten other people who used the same garage."

A Tesco spokesman said: "We temporarily closed the diesel pumps at our Harlow, Church Langley Petrol Station while we investigated a reported issue with the fuel."

"We are in the process of contacting all customers who have come forward to say that they have been affected and where we are found to have been at fault we will of course cover the reasonable costs of any repairs needed. We would like to apologise to customers."

The diesel pumps have been reopened following testing and investigation.

Prince, the ginger cat, was put down by a vet

Pet death blamed on poison

A HARLOW woman is warning pet owners after her cat died from a "deliberate," anti-freeze poisoning.

Emily Wadding of Orchard Croft, Harlow, has now lost six cats in three years in similar circumstances after her ginger feline Prince was put to sleep on Sunday (June 18).

She said: "I found my cat at the bottom of my fence crying out loudly and clearly very distressed. My cat was rushed to the vets and put on a drip."

"We were told we would be contacted once they knew what was wrong but deep down I already knew."

"My cat had been poisoned with anti-freeze. This is my sixth cat in the last three years to have been poisoned and had to be put to sleep."

Ms Wadding said cats are being targeted in the area by people leaving out anti-freeze.

Fatal

If consumed by animals anti-freeze can often prove fatal.

Ms Wadding said: "It shuts down all their organs, slowly and painfully, starting with the liver."

"Crystals appear in the urine which is a tell-tale sign to the vets that anti-freeze has been used."

"When my first cat was poisoned he appeared to be staggering, head hung low, disorientated and eyes and eye lids half-open and half-shut. All of these are the symptoms of anti-freeze poisoning."

She added: "People should be made aware there is a problem in Harlow and especially in my area."

A spokesman from the RSPCA said: "Anti-freeze poisoning can cause pain, suffering, distress and ultimately, death."

"Poisoning cats can constitute a criminal offence."

"Under the Animal Welfare Act 2006 the maximum penalty for anyone found guilty is up to six months imprisonment and/or a £20,000 fine."

Fairground pair charged over death of 7-year-old

Youngster was crushed to death while playing on a bouncy castle

By Narbeh Minassian
narbeh.minassian@hertsexsexnews.co.uk

TWO fairground workers have been charged in connection with the death of a seven-year-old girl who was crushed to death on a bouncy castle.

Summer Grant suffered serious injuries while playing on the inflatable which was swept 'some distance' at a funfair in Harlow on March 26, 2016.

The youngster, from Norwich, was taken to the nearby Princess Alexandra Hospital but died a few hours later.

Shelby Thurston, 25, and William Thurston, 28, both fairground employees, of Wilburton, Cambridgeshire, were arrested in connection with the investigation.

More than a year after Summer's death, the pair have been charged with manslaughter by gross negligence.

They are also accused of failing to discharge a general health and safety duty under the Health and Safety at Work Act.

Both will appear at Chelmsford Magistrates' Court on July 19.

Detectives are continuing their enquiries and are trying to trace a witness who was near the fairground rides at the time of the incident. He is described as a young black man, believed to be aged in his teens.

Following the tragedy, Summer's mother Cara Blackie said she was "truly heartbroken" at the loss of her "bright, beautiful and most loving little girl".

Summer's father Lee Grant described her as "the most happy, polite and beautiful girl in the world".

Some 200 people paid tribute to Summer at a vigil held at Harlow Town Park in April last year.

Information

Punam Malhan from the Crown Prosecution Service in the East of England said: "I have advised Essex Police to charge Shelby and William Thurston with gross negligence manslaughter following the death of seven-year-old Summer Grant on a bouncy castle at a funfair in Harlow in March 2016.

"They have also each been charged with a health and safety offence.

"Mr and Mrs Thurston will appear at Chelmsford Magistrates' Court next month.

"May I remind all concerned that Shelby and William Thurston have a right to a fair trial.

Summer Grant was crushed to death

"It is very important that there should be no reporting, commentary or sharing of information online which could in any way prejudice these proceedings."

Essex Police previously confirmed the Health and Safety Executive are also looking into the circumstances of the youngster's death.

■ Anyone with information should contact police on 101.

Drug runner caught in car with heroin

A DRUG runner has escaped jail after he admitted possessing crack cocaine and heroin.

Suraj Lohia, 26, of Ward Avenue, Grays, was pulled over on February 6 by police in Harlow who found heroin and crack cocaine worth £145 in his car.

He previously pleaded guilty to two charges of possession with intent to supply.

Recorder William Clegg sentenced him to an 18-month prison term, suspended for two years, at Chelmsford Crown Court last Wednesday, June 14.

The court heard Lohia told Essex Police he was going to Harlow town centre but his sat nav system revealed he was on trips to several addresses in the town.

Phone

While the police were in the car, the defendant's phone rang with the number of a known drug group flashing up. Further examinations revealed Lohia had received detailed instructions to deliver drugs. Police found the drugs in food wrapping in the car's boot.

Shade Abiadeon, mitigating on behalf of Lohia, said: "He has been struggling financially and made some wrong decisions.

"Things started to spiral out of control three years ago. He has an elderly and disabled mother, who relies on his care."

He must also serve 160 hours of community service and pay a victim surcharge.

Royal seal of approval for efforts of chief executive

School Trust boss honoured in Queen's Birthday Honours list

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

THE chief executive of Burnt Mill Academy Trust (BMAT) has been made CBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours list.

Helena Mills oversees seven schools in the group including Burnt Mill Academy of which she was previously head teacher.

She said: "It is not something I ever expected, but I am delighted the importance of education and those involved in it have been recognised in this way."

"I feel that there is a whole team of people who have worked by my side and they deserve to receive this award too."

The Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (CBE) is the third highest royal honour.

It is only awarded to a handful of people each year.

Ms Mills began her teaching career in Cumbria in 1990 and worked at various schools before taking over as head teacher of Burnt Mill in 2010.

Under her leadership the school's GCSE results improved – and in November 2012 Burnt Mill was rated 'outstanding' by Ofsted.

Helena Mills has been awarded a CBE

BMAT was created in 2013 with Ms Mills as chief executive.

The group also includes Harlow primary schools Cooks Spinney, Little Parndon and Freshwaters, as well as Forest Hall and Magna Carta in Stansted and Roydon Primary Academy.

Next September the Sir Frederick Gibberd Academy will become the second secondary school to open in Harlow under the BMAT banner.

Ms Mills continued: "I always wanted to follow a career which involved supporting people.

"I am very proud to be a teacher and some of my most positive experiences in the last 27 years have been in the classroom."

Residents brand road surfaces as 'terrible'

A HARLOW residential street has been branded 'unfit for purpose' by residents because of hazardous surfaces and poor driving standards.

Essex County Council has committed to repairing Momples Road this year following complaints and for some residents improvements cannot come soon enough.

John Curry, of Old Orchard, Harlow, said he has given up cycling along Momples Road because "It is no longer fit for purpose".

"Very few drivers observe the 20mph speed limit," he said.

"There is a considerable amount of parking which, combined with traffic and buses, means there is a constant threat to vulnerable road users of being carved up."

"The road surface is in a terrible state and there are too many faults to list."

"There are speed cushions that are supposed to slow the traffic but don't. Plus the cushions are steep sided and often get broken, which is an added hazard."

Harlow councillor Mike Danvers responded to complaints about the state of Momples Road.

He said: "I would encourage as many residents as possible to complain online to Essex about the state of their unmaintained roads."

Council swift to allay concerns in wake of Grenfell Tower tragedy

High-rise flats regularly inspected and comply with safety legislation, says authority

HARLOW Council has attempted to reassure residents living in tower blocks about the fire safety measures in place following the major fire at Grenfell Tower in London last week.

Following the fire the council has said that fire safety is a top priority and that the council works closely with the Essex Fire and Rescue Service to regularly review fire safety.

The Essex Fire and Rescue Service has approved the approach the council takes towards its tower blocks, supported housing and temporary accommodation.

So, what fire safety measures are in place for Harlow's 14 tower blocks?

Fire safety risk assessments are completed every two years in line with legislation, where all outcomes are prioritised and included in the council's annual programme of works.

Council officers carry out both weekly and monthly inspections of tower blocks and any actions are recorded and dealt with as a priority, including the removal of any flammable materials stored in communal stairwells and areas, such as dumped rubbish, as well as checking evacuation arrangements and the position of signage.

Inspections

There are no outstanding actions from any recent inspections.

Each tower block has a fire safety action plan which is published on the council's website with guidance posted on noticeboards in communal areas.

All new tenants and leaseholders are given a copy of these plans.

Netteswell and Pennymead tower blocks have fire alarms which are tested regularly.

Installing fire alarms in all tower blocks has not been identified as a requirement from fire risk assessments.

Smoke detectors are fitted within every council home and serviced annually.

Some homes also have heat detectors as well as smoke detectors.

Communal doors and internal doors to flats are fire resistant and these are renewed as required following fire risk assessments.

Emergency lighting and lighting conductors within tower blocks are part of the council's regular inspection programme and are compliant and certificated.

Cladding

Of the 14 high-rise tower blocks only Brenthall Towers has had cladding fitted, in the late 1990s.

This cladding is made out of solid, non-combustible materials, with the system and materials complying with building regulations.

The design of the cladding is not the same design as used on Grenfell Tower.

Council housing officers will be delivering letters providing reassurance to all tower block residents next week and information and advice will also appear in the next edition of the council's magazine Harlow Times.

Councillor Mark Wilkinson, portfolio holder for housing, said: "My heartfelt thoughts and sympathies are with everyone affected by this awful tragedy in North Kensington."

"The local community there and across the country, including the Harlow community, are doing what they can to support the families affected."

"We know this tragic event is likely to concern our tower block residents so we want to provide reassurance at this time on the measures we have in place."

"Our fire safety plans are always under review and we will continue to work closely with the Essex Fire and Rescue Service to ensure the safety of residents living in our tower blocks."

"We will be following the proposed public enquiry and full investigation into the Grenfell Tower fire very carefully and I am sure that all social housing providers, including Harlow Council, will respond to any recommendations to changes in the building and fire regulations."

Essex Fire and Rescue would like to remind everyone that home fire safety visits can be carried out free of charge to anyone living in Essex.

They can run through escape plans and fit smoke alarms if needed.

Air ambulance needed after driver is hurt in serious road accident

A DRIVER was taken to hospital in a serious condition by an air ambulance after a collision in Hart Road, Harlow on the Thursday June 15.

The man suffered a suspected fractured pelvis in a collision between a motorbike and a car at the roundabout at 6.19pm, forcing the closure of Cambridge Road in both directions.

Medics arrived on the scene within eight minutes and two ambulances, an ambulance officer, a rapid response vehicle and an air ambulance also attended.

The patient was taken to Royal London Hospital for further treatment.

Another driver was also hurt but is not believed to have suffered serious injuries and was taken to Princess Alexandra Hospital for treatment.

Meanwhile two men were taken to hospital following another crash on the same day.

A Volvo XC90 and a Suzuki motorcycle crashed on Cambridge Road, near to the junction of Hart Road at around 6.20pm.

The motorbike rider, a 22-year-old man, is believed to have suffered serious injuries and was taken to The Royal London

The 19-year-old pillion passenger on the motorbike suffered a leg and spinal injury and was taken to Princess Alexandra Hospital by ambulance.

Essex Police are asking for any witnesses or anyone with any information by contacting PC Tina Quinlivan at Chigwell Roads Policing Unit on 101.

Officers are also asking for anyone with dash cam footage to come forward.

All smiles at the opening - but Sir Charles Kao UTC now requires improvement

'Disappointing' first inspection for tech's head

Principal admits there are 'challenges'

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsexnews.co.uk

THE principal of Sir Charles Kao University Technical College (UTC) said a 'requires improvement' result in their first Ofsted inspection was disappointing.

The technical college in Velizy Avenue, Harlow, opened in September 2014 and offers courses for 14 to 18-year-olds. There is a focus on technical subjects to meet a skills shortage in the region.

Joined

Michael McKeaveney, principal of the UTC, said: "While this judgement is disappointing, what it highlights is that we are making a clear difference to the young people who have joined us.

"From a strong careers programme to the meaningful destinations of our Year 13 leavers, we are clearly preparing students for life in modern Britain.

"As the report identifies, we have had some challenges and are already making changes to secure a more positive judgement in future and we look forward to the positive results in their next visit."

Ofsted inspectors visited the UTC, which shares a site with Harlow College, on Tuesday, April 25, and published the report on Thursday, June 8.

The report states the centre requires improvement in overall effectiveness and all five key areas of inspection.

These are: Effectiveness of leadership and management, quality of teaching, learning and assessment, personal development, behaviour and welfare, outcomes for students and 16-19 study programmes.

John Randall, lead inspector, wrote: "Leaders have not done enough to ensure the teaching, learning and assessment are good across all subjects. Therefore students learning is not consistent.

"Leaders have not acted quickly enough to prevent outcomes being too low and below the government floor standards in 2016.

Vocational

"The good progress students make in their vocational learning in the sixth form is not matched in a range of other academic subjects."

Dr Paul Westlake, chairman of governors, said: "The Ofsted report contains many positive comments about the UTC but a number of areas where rapid improvement is required.

"The governors and leadership of the UTC are working hard to deliver such improvement."

Firefighters check safety in wake of high-rise blaze

ESSEX County Fire and Rescue Service will visit every high-rise residential building in Essex following the catastrophic Grenfell Tower fire in London last week.

In the early hours of Wednesday, June 14 morning, the London Fire Service were confronted with one of the biggest and most dangerous residential fires in history, with 79 people now either confirmed or presumed dead.

To reassure residents in high-rise flats across Essex, teams of firefighters and community officers will be visiting all 270 high-rise buildings in Essex - starting with the tallest properties that are over 10 floors high.

The fire service will speak to the residents and reassure them that the buildings are safe, along with further fire safety advice.

The service's technical fire safety team will also be visiting the buildings to check their fire risk assessments.

The service's acting chief fire officer Adam Eckley said: "We have organised dozens of teams across Essex consisting of firefighters, community safety teams and volunteers to visit every single high-rise block of flats.

"The teams will talk to the residents and give them reassurance and safety advice and also answer any specific fire safety concerns they have.

"I want to reassure the high-rise residents of Essex that as a fire service we will be doing everything we can to make them feel safer in their homes."

■ SMALL BUSINESS OF THE YEAR

SMALL Business of the Year is an award that celebrates companies that have achieved big things with small resources, and it has certainly caught the attention of the Essex business community. More businesses hoping to take home the award include Pixie's Barber Shop, Woodruff Financial Planning and Polar Creative.

Pixie's Barber Shop is located in Harlow and is a family-friendly unisex barber shop that has made quite the impact on the area. Offering services including total grooming for men and colouring for women, the salon also comes complete with a Mini Cooper-shaped chair to make the experience more exciting for the youngsters.

Although the nomination process for the Essex Business Excellence Awards does not come to a close until midnight on Friday, August 25, we have spotted some great firms who have already shown their interest in the awards. Two categories proving to be very popular are Small Business of the Year and the Customer Service Excellence Award.

Based in Colchester, award-winning Woodruff Financial Planning provides clients with the tools they need to secure their financial future and will be hoping to add to its collection of awards at this year's event.

Polar Creative is an award-winning graphic design and web development agency offering services including branding, design, web design, print, marketing and display. To date, the company has won several awards including "Best Marketing & Creative" at the Essex Digital Awards 2016.

■ CUSTOMER SERVICE EXCELLENCE AWARD

A COMPANY lives or dies by its customers, so a high level of customer service is paramount and it is this dedication to customer satisfaction that the Wivenhoe House is a four-star luxury country-house hotel offering magnificent rooms, as well as providing the perfect backdrop for weddings and conferences. Priding themselves on the special experience they give to their clients, the hotel management and staff are eager to add an award to their name.

Raymond Bottone Hair Salon is located in the buzzing borough of Brentwood and offers locals a luxurious salon experience. Catering to both men and

#EBEA2017

While the business community of Essex is starting to get excited about the Essex Business Excellence Awards, the behind-the-scenes planning and organising is well under way. An event of this kind requires the perfect venue, and we are thrilled to announce that we have secured The City Pavilion in Romford as the backdrop for this glittering event. Those hoping to attend can make a note of Wednesday, November 29, as the date of the eagerly anticipated awards ceremony

Critical comments

I READ with interest Robert Halfon's critical comments on Theresa May following his sacking from his government job.

I remember receiving, among many other glossy blue leaflets during the campaign, his election statement with the heading "I'm standing by Theresa May". Inside was a picture of him standing proudly next to TM.

On the facing page were several quotes from his leader, prominently featuring "strong and stable government".

What a difference a fortnight makes in politics.

Shame on you Mr Halfon.

Proud of sculptures

AS we, the Friends of Harlow Sculpture and Gibberd Gallery, regularly bring visitors into the town to see the wonderful collection of paintings in the Gibberd Gallery and the unique collection of sculptures placed in the community where people live, work and play it is very pleasing to know that the citizens of Harlow also contribute to the care of the sculptures.

We especially want to say Thank You to all the people using the Charity Car Park at the College on Saturday June 3 who helped us raise over £300 which will go toward the cleaning and care of one of the town's sculptures.

We have also been very fortunate to have been chosen as

It's a privilege to play a sophisticated lead in a show

The series was shot on location in the French Riviera. How did you find that experience?

IT was amazing. It was such a privilege and a delight to be living there for seven months. I would live there permanently if I could.

It's just a lovely place in all seasons. Everything from the language and working with a French crew, to the food and the landscape, it was such an adventure.

Is the Riviera really filled with wealth, glitz and glamour?

THERE'S a mix. There are expensive yachts and estates but there is also a middle class. There are also many people who seem to live very simply.

Nice is more diverse in terms of economics than some of the neighbouring towns but there is obvious wealth in the Riviera that I haven't seen in America. There's new money in the United States but there's old money in Europe.

Are you a fashion fan and did you keep any of the clothes worn by your character Georgina?

I DID purchase some of the clothing and there was a store nearby that had beautifully curated designer clothing that would become my temptation.

I'm becoming interested in fashion more and more. I appreciate very well made clothing. I do appreciate beautiful design and really well-made manufactured clothing. I treat it almost like art.

Billionaire lifestyles, double-dealing and corruption - MARION McMULLEN finds out how Julia Stiles dived into the world of the filthy rich for crime thriller Riviera Georgina is an expert curator. Did you learn a lot about the art world while making the series?

I WAS curious about how you price art and so I did some research in preparation for the show by speaking to some curators and dealers about how that works. That was really interesting to me.

What kind of art do you have in your home?

I FIND the business side of the art market interesting but it's not what I would put in my home.

I really like pieces that have sentimental value to me. For instance I have a piece of graffiti art that I got from the last Jason Bourne movie. I like things like that, that provoke memories or are inspiring.

Property aside, what has been your most extravagant purchase?

I SPEND more of my money on experiences like travel, but I bought a piano, even though I don't really even play the piano. I bought it with the intention of learning!

The crime thriller has many great writers, including The Crying Game Oscar winner Neil Jordan and John Banville. What were your first impressions of the script?

I REMEMBER thinking that it was very poetic in a way that I hadn't seen in a screenplay before. It was really intriguing and I loved the setting.

There's such a nice contrast between what the characters are going through and what they're doing versus the beautiful, glamorous setting of the Riviera.

To what extent do you build up a back story for the character of Georgina?

I ONLY really build up a back story or flesh out details of things that I think are going to apply on screen and are relevant to the story we are telling.

So for, example, what happens to a character on her fifth birthday probably doesn't matter, but in this situation, knowing where Georgina came from in terms of her education, her upbringing, wealth and class I thought was relevant.

Her relationship with her father was relevant because she talks about it a little bit and I think it affects her view, in hindsight, of her marriage.

So that was something that I thought through more with the writers than I would have perhaps done on another show.

Was it exciting to be able to explore the character in depth over 10 episodes?

YES, I've never worked on anything for this long and never played a character for this amount of screen time, so inevitably you get to do more.

I was really excited at how much I got to do with Georgina. It's really rare. It's a privilege to play a sophisticated lead in a show and have the opportunity to play her in all different situations. At times she is naive and at other times she is cunning.

How would you describe her relationship with her husband's family?

FRAUGHT. She's not really welcome in the family. Her position is very threatened and there isn't much love among the people who are forced to be together after her husband Constantine's death.

Did you enjoy working with such an ensemble cast including Lena Olin, Adrian Lester and Anthony LePaglia?

IT was fantastic.

They're all so talented. It was a delight working with Lena Olin in particular.

She's such a formidable woman. And the actors who play the Clios children were all unique and interesting.

Everyone cared very much about the work we were doing, which was important on the show.

Was it the first time you had met many of your fellow castmates?

YES, it was the first time I'd met any of them.

I also had many scenes with Adrian Lester, who not only directed us in two episodes but is such a talented actor and a fun and kind person to be around. I really enjoyed my scenes with him and I enjoyed being directed by him too.

What characteristics of Georgina's do you most admire?

HER resilience. One question that would come up is 'why doesn't she just leave?'

Of course there would be no show if she did but she insists on fighting for her understanding of her marriage, her understanding of what happens and also her position in the household. I admire that. I think that takes a lot of strength and courage.

TRANSFORMERS: THE LAST KNIGHT (12A)

The battle between the last vestiges of mankind and the Transformers reaches a shattering conclusion in the fifth and final picture in the bombastic franchise, directed by Michael Bay.

Following events in Transformers: Age of Extinction, The Last Knight opens after Optimus Prime (voiced by Peter Cullen) has temporarily abandoned Earth in search of the Autobots' creators.

He leaves behind fellow machines including Bumblebee and Hound (John Goodman) to protect humanity from the continuing onslaught of the dinobots and the revitalised Decepticons, led by Megatron (Frank Welker).

It transpires that there is a long history of collaboration between humans and robots stretching back to the rule of King Arthur (Liam Garrigan). Esteemed historian and astronomer Sir Edmund Burton (Sir Anthony Hopkins) knows about a dark secret buried in time and he issues a rallying cry to save Earth from destruction.

Spirited Oxford university professor Viviane Wembly (Laura Haddock) answers the call along with inventor Cade Yeager (Mark Wahlberg), US military Colonel William Lennox (Josh Duhamel), orphaned street urchin Isabella (Isabela Moner) and her daredevil pals.

They must understand why the Transformers keep returning to the third rock from the sun and learn painful lessons from the past that could tip the war in favour of humanity. However, salvation comes at a price and some of the resistance will have to sacrifice their lives for the greater good.

THE BOOK OF HENRY (12A)

Director Colin Trevorrow's eagerly anticipated follow-up to rampaging dino-blockbuster Jurassic World is a different lumbering beast. Clumsily concocted from equal parts rites-of-passage drama, terminal illness weepie and revenge thriller, The Book of Henry is that car accident on the other side of the motorway that irresistibly draws eyes that should be concentrating on the road ahead.

Susan Carpenter (Naomi Watts, inset) relies on her gifted 11-year-old son Henry (Jaeden Lieberher) to manage the household finances and protect his weakling brother Peter (Jacob Tremblay), while she earns a meagre wage as a diner waitress. When Henry witnesses an unspeakable act in the neighbour's house, he employs his brilliant mind to conceive the perfect murder of an abusive father.

Diane Keaton as Emily Walters and Brendan Gleeson as Donald Horner star as an unlikely couple in romantic comedy Hampstead

The odd couple

HAMPSTEAD (12A)

Cast in the same mould as Richard Curtis' rom com Notting Hill, Hampstead is a twee tale of star-crossed lovers across the social divide, who find common ground in a court case over squatters' rights in verdant and des-res London NW3.

Robert Festinger's script is loosely inspired by the true story of a homeless Irishman called Harry Hallowes, who won title deeds worth two million pounds after living in a tumbledown wooden shack on Hampstead Heath for two decades.

Jaw-dropping truth is interwoven with sugar-coated fiction in Joel Hopkins' rose-tinted picture, which engineers romance between a socially awkward hermit and an American expat widow.

It's a chocolate box laden with first world problems and impeccably tailored strife.

We are supposed to muster sympathy for the heroine because she has been left in dire financial straits by her philandering husband.

How does she cope with the stress of possible eviction?

By window shopping a designer grey beret with an eye-watering £120 price tag. Oh woe is her.

Diane Keaton and Brendan Gleeson catalyse only the faintest flickers of sexual chemistry as the plot meanders towards its life-affirming resolution.

En route there are flashes of earthy humour like when a rival for Keaton's affections feebly brandishes a ukulele as a weapon and Gleeson barks: "What are you going to do?"

Strum me to death?"

A terribly polite plucking is more likely.

It has been a year since Emily Walters (Keaton) lost her no-good husband Charles and she has channelled her grief and rage into volunteer work at a local charity shop.

Other female residents of her apartment block, led by busy body Fiona (Lesley Manville), include Emily in their social gatherings and offer withering advice on remarrying at the earliest opportunity.

"If you wait too long, you shrivel up like some imported apricot sitting on the shelf in Waitrose," chirps Fiona.

She sets up Emily with creepy accountant James Smythe (Jason Watkins), who promises to clear the mounting debts – "no strings attached".

After one uncomfortable date, Emily stares through her binoculars and spies Donald Horner (Gleeson) in his woodland retreat.

She becomes fascinated by the foul-tempered misfit and worms her way into his simple existence to the surprise of her well-to-do son, Philip (James Norton).

When greedy property developers serve Donald with an eviction notice, Emily coordinates the Save The Shack campaign with other do-gooder residents.

Hampstead is like a glass of expensive champagne that has lost most of its fizz, yet still slips down pleasantly.

Keaton and Gleeson are an attractive odd couple, who are more convinced of their characters' suitability than us.

Watkins is skin-crawling as a bean counter with ulterior motives and an ensemble of British character actors fill out the largely forgettable supporting roles.

James Norton stars as Philip, son of Diane Keaton's Emily Walters

PAST TIMES

It's 50 years since five brothers brought Jacksonmania to the music world. JOE NERSSESIAN talks to Marlon Jackson about their success and how it all began

THE Jackson 5 were the original boy band, going on to produce one of music's biggest pop stars. Child stars Jackie, Tito, Jermaine, Marlon and Michael hit number one with their first four singles I Want You Back, ABC, The Love You Share and I'll Be There and even had their own TV show.

The brothers from Indiana had an average age of 12 when they turned professional. Five decades on from their first record deal, their youthful funky pop-soul continues to grace party playlists.

The longevity of their music is a blessing, says a soft-spoken Marlon. At 60, he has been part of one of the world's most successful groups (on and off) for more than 90% of his life.

He was just 10 when the group was first signed in 1967 and he is the youngest living member of the original line-up. Michael was the youngest.

"It doesn't feel like 50 years at all, it's gone so quickly," he says. "To see that people still enjoy the music and the fans are still there loving the music is an achievement."

During the height of Jacksonmania, crowds would almost pile up on top of each other close to the stage. Early footage shows girls climbing frantically over seats to get closer, with police officers looking alarmed nearby. The vibe is a little different now, explains Marlon, but he is still amazed at the number of youngsters they attract.

"It's like 'How do you know these songs?' They weren't even born but their mums and dads still play them and they fell in love with us and now they are playing them for their kids. It's amazing."

The group's ongoing popularity means they continue to grace stages across the globe. This summer they are returning to the UK as part of their 50th anniversary celebrations, notably making their long-overdue debut at Glastonbury.

It was overnight during the festival eight years ago that thousands of music fans learned of Michael's death. It never gets easier, says Marlon. "You never get over it," he adds. "You have to learn to live with it. That's how I put it."

He remembers their relationship as one filled with laughter and, of course, dancing.

"We were the jokers, we were always joking and messing around. My grandmother used to tell me and Michael 'Cut a rug for me, cut a rug.'"

As well as Glastonbury, The Jacksons are also playing number of other UK dates and a headline slot at Newmarket Racecourse as part of

The Jackson 5.

Jockey Club Live events.

"My family has been blessed and we're trying to unite people together as one. Over the years you kind of understand everyone wants the same thing, and that's peace. I don't care where you go, it's true," says Marlon. "That's still our message today because we have a responsibility to the next generation. They should have a peaceful environment to grow up in and it's not happening at the moment."

"It's our responsibility because they are the future and, if we instill the right beliefs in them by the time they get old enough and start ruling, trust me those beliefs we instilled within them will begin to shine and blossom. There's too much emphasis on violence and not enough on unity and togetherness."

"That's the message that was bestowed upon my family to deliver."

He says they were less aware when they were children of the attention they received.

"We weren't thinking about the accomplishments and the other things then. We were just enjoying the music and enjoying doing it, seeing different people around the world, loving the music, spreading love and making people happy."

And the long career has clearly taken its toll. Marlon is adamant he won't continue to perform into his 70s. "Don't forget I've been doing this since I was seven, eight years old, something like that. You won't see me in 10 years or 15 years still," he continues, "Nope, no, no way."

"I will not be performing if I can't perform the way I want to perform on that stage. I've always said that. That's when I'm going to stop because you've got to be comfortable and you've got to feel like you've done your 100 or more percent."

"Right now I've still got moves," he says, clapping his hands. "I can still cut a couple of slices for sure."

Apple's turbocharged tablet: the only computer that you'll ever need?

Apple's new iPad Pro family

The new iPad Pro works even better with the Apple Pencil

TRYING to come to a view about the new iPad Pros from Apple is a bit like trying to decide the outcome of a football match at half-time – we don't have all the information yet.

Of one thing there is no doubt – the new iPad Pros are not just the best iPads ever, but they're also the best tablet computers anyone has made.

They are magnificent machines, beautifully designed and amazingly powerful.

But they are only half the story – and the other half won't be realised until iOS 11 is released in the autumn.

We've seen a sneak peek of iOS 11 – the next version of the iPad and iPhone operating system – and its focus is very clearly on making the iPad an even more useful tool.

It adds so many new features that make the iPad better for doing so many of the things we think of as work. And so many new features that will help us do the other things we use our iPads for – looking at websites, watching videos, playing games. Not work.

But for now all we have are the machines themselves running iOS 10. And they're still mightily impressive.

The biggest change to the hardware is a brand new size – the 9.7in iPad Pro is no more, and we now have a 10.5in version to go with the 12.9in version.

That 10.5in refers to the screen size, of course. The iPad itself is just a little bigger than the 9.7in version and there's hardly a difference in the hand. It's the screen that's bigger. And what a screen it is.

Given that the iPad is fundamentally just a screen, it makes sense that the most impressive new tech in this new iPad is reserved for that area of the device.

Of course there's excellent battery life (up to 10 hours of web surfing and watching videos, and only an hour less than that if you're using the mobile data network). And of course there is screaming fast performance (faster than a lot of laptops, in fact) in the new A10X Fusion Apple-made chip. It has six cores and offers 30% faster performance than its predecessor.

And of course it has a better camera – a 12MP camera capable of capturing high resolution images and 4K video. It's the same camera you'll find in Apple's latest iPhone in fact.

But it's the iPad's new screen that shines. Literally, in some ways.

For a start it's even brighter and less reflective, making it easier to view even in direct sunlight.

It also features a new technology Apple is calling ProMotion – this refers to the number of times the screen refreshes each second.

The new iPad tops out at 120Hz – twice the refresh rate of the old iPad Pro. This means fast moving content appears smoother.

That's not all, all content looks better because the screen is capable of varying frame rates, to match the rate of the content it's playing. This saves on power, too.

Another knock-on effect of ProMotion is the Apple Pencil works even better with the iPad Pros – the increased frame-rate means there's even less lag when drawing, and there wasn't much to begin with.

The TrueTone display, which matches the tone of the screen to the tone of the outside environment, makes its debut in the bigger iPad Pro this time around – in fact feature-wise the two new iPads are the same apart from their size.

To round out the offering, Apple has also upped the maximum storage you can have. You can now have an iPad Pro with 512GB of storage.

iOS 11 will bring a new dock (the icons at the bottom of the screen), a new app called Files to allow easy access to all your content, wherever it is stored, better multitasking and the ability to drag and drop things between apps.

I've always thought the debate about whether the iPad was useful for "work" was nonsense, anyway. It depends, of course, on what kind of work you are doing.

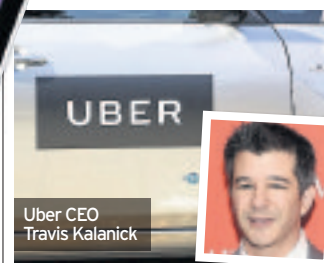

But with a machine like this, allied to software like iOS 11, the limit to what you can do with an iPad, work or not work, has been raised considerably.

It might be the only computer you'll ever need.

■ The new iPad Pros start at £619 for the 10.5in version and £769 for the 12.9in version. Visit apple.com/uk/ipad-pro/ for more details.

TECH THAT...

A ROUND-UP OF THE LATEST NEWS IN THE DIGITAL WORLD

Uber CEO Travis Kalanick

IT has not been a good week for Uber boss Travis Kalanick. The man behind the company that has infuriated Black Cab drivers everywhere has taken a leave of absence from the company after a series of scandals and mis-steps.

It's not known when he will return.

Uber's year has gone from bad to worse amid allegations of sexual harassment, a lawsuit from Google's parent company alleging theft of its technology, and the notorious video of Travis himself arguing with one of his own drivers about pay and conditions.

A report by the company itself suggested the CEO's responsibilities be "reviewed and reallocated".

So Travis is gone for now, and Uber faces a long hard slog to rebuild its reputation.

FACEBOOK and Twitter's week has been a cakewalk compared to Uber's – even though new studies from the University of Oxford into online propaganda said the services are being used to manipulate public opinion.

In Russia, the study finds, almost 45% of all highly active Twitter accounts are actually bots churning out mis-information and propaganda designed to mislead and manipulate the way people think.

The professor of internet studies at the university, Philip Howard, said that in the nine countries studied, including the UK and the US, the lies and misinformation found in traditional propaganda were widespread across social media, and its distribution is supported by the algorithms Facebook and Twitter use to surface popular content.

The techniques used, the report said, were first used by the Russian government, which flooded social networks with support for President Vladimir Putin to effectively drown out dissenting voices.

In other words, don't believe everything you read, and even less of what you read on social networks.

APP OF THE WEEK

GLASTONBURY 2017
(IOS & ANDROID, FREE)

IT'S that time of year again – the wonderful celebration of music and culture that is the Glastonbury Festival returns to Worthy Farm in Somerset this weekend. And if you're going, you'll certainly need the festival's very own app.

It's created by EE and allows you to personalise your calendar for the weekend so you don't miss any of the acts you want to see.

There's also a map which will show you where you are on site so you don't get lost, and a Facebook log-in feature which allows you to see which of your friends are at the festival.

Don't leave home without it.

FOOD & DRINK

CHICKEN TONIGHT

MOUTHWATERING
PAKORA

FORGET your regular takeaway - here's how to serve up an impressive platter of this favourite Indian dish at home.

INGREDIENTS (Serves 2)

250g boneless chicken breast, cubed or sliced; ½tsp ground turmeric; ½tsp carom seeds (also known as ajwain, available from Tesco); ¾tsp garam masala; ½tsp chilli powder, to taste; ¾tsp garlic and ginger paste (see recipe panel right); 2tbsp finely chopped coriander; white of 1 small egg; 65g chickpea flour (or gram flour, available from Tesco); sparkling water; rapeseed oil, for deep-frying; salt; lemon wedges, onion rings and lettuce, to serve

- 1. For the chicken: Place the meat in a bowl and mix with the turmeric, carom, garam masala, chilli powder and a little salt, so that the meat is evenly coated. Let this sit for about 20 minutes.
- 2. Stir in the garlic and ginger paste, coriander and the egg white. Now start adding the chickpea flour a little at a time, coating the meat, adding a splash of sparkling water from time to time. Continue until all the flour is used up and it has the consistency of ketchup.
- 3. Heat enough oil for deep-frying in a deep, heavy-based pan or deep-fat fryer, to between 170°C and 180°C. Using a wire mesh spoon, slowly lower the pakora into the hot oil. You may need to fry in batches and cooking times will depend on the size of your chicken chunks, but it should take only a few minutes to cook through.
- 4. Serve with lettuce, onion rings and lemon wedges.

Dan Toombs likes curry - a lot - that's why he's called The Curry Guy. Here, he shares his passion and tells KEELEY BOLGER about his debut cookbook

Currying favour for family mealtimes

CALIFORNIAN Dan Toombs' introduction to curry houses didn't come until he was 22, when he worked in a Croydon pub while on a student visa.

A few trips to the local establishment and he was hooked. "I'd never tried Indian food because it just wasn't available over there at that time - it is now - and I loved it," says the enthusiast, who now lives in North Yorkshire. "I've been trying to make it ever since."

He scoured his home state in the United States for Indian food but his searches came up short. So, when he made a permanent move to the UK in 1993, the studious hunt for the perfect curry resumed - with Dan meeting chefs to find out their secrets, setting up his blog The Curry Guy and later starting his year-long curry challenge.

And his debut cookbook, The Curry Guy, in which he pools his knowledge from years of diligent curry-eating, and his quest, which he, his wife and three children took part in, brings the diversity of the cuisine into sharp focus.

"People say, 'I'm going out for a curry' but that might mean you're going out for tandoori chicken or a dosa or a fruit lassi. We might have fruit lassis in the morning and a barbecue in the evening. It's never boring."

The variety of the cuisine put the family's taste buds to the test and Dan is convinced their success shows there's a curry for everybody.

"One thing I say is that these recipes are the way I make them at home, but there's no reason why you can't do them however you want.

"Sauces all have different heat levels. Madras is going to be hotter than a tikka masala sauce, but don't not eat madras just because you don't love spicy food - just don't put as much chilli in it. There are so many nice flavours in each of those different sauces, there's no reason why you have to ruin it for yourself.

"It's really easy to heat up a curry - all you have to do is add chillies. But once it's too spicy, it's really hard to cool it down, so just be sensible with your cooking and you'll be fine."

The Curry Guy by Dan Toombs, Quadrille, £12.99

INGREDIENTS (SERVES 2)

6 garlic cloves, unpeeled; 1 pineapple; ½ tsp roasted cumin seeds; 4 fresh green chillies, very finely chopped; 4tbsp chopped coriander, plus extra to serve; 2tbsp rapeseed oil; 1tsp mustard seeds; ½ onion, finely chopped; 1tbsp garlic paste; cassia leaves (also known as Indian bay leaves, available from Amazon); 1tsp ground cumin; 1tsp chilli powder ½ tsp ground turmeric; 1 tomato, chopped; 2tbsp tomato puree; 500g raw prawns, shelled and deveined; juice of 1 lime; salt; Naans or chapattis, to serve

METHOD:

- 1. Roast the garlic cloves directly

TROPICAL TWIST

PRAWNS AND PINEAPPLE

over a gas hob flame on a skewer or a dry frying pan until blackened all over. Set aside to cool.

- 2. Cut the pineapple in half lengthways and scoop out most of the flesh. Place the scooped-out pineapple in a blender, add the cumin seeds and half a teaspoon of salt, and squeeze the roasted garlic out of their skins into the blender. Blend to a paste then transfer to a bowl.

- 3. Add the chillies and chopped coriander to the pineapple paste and mix well. Reserve two tablespoons for the curry and store the rest in the fridge until ready to serve.
- 4. Heat the oil in a large saucepan over a high heat and add the mustard seeds. When they begin to pop, reduce the heat to medium-high and add the onion along with a pinch of salt.

- 5. Fry until translucent and soft, then stir in the garlic paste and fry for a further 30 seconds.
- 6. Add four tablespoons of water, the cassia leaves, cumin, chilli powder, turmeric and the reserved two tablespoons of pineapple paste. Cook for a further two minutes then add the chopped tomato and tomato puree.
- 7. Throw in the prawns and stir into the sauce until cooked through. Check for seasoning and spoon into the hollowed-out pineapples.
- 8. Top with chopped coriander and a squeeze of lime juice, and serve with the spicy pineapple paste, and some naans or chapattis.

I HAVEN'T worked out what the weather is supposed to be doing as one minute I'm roasting, and the next the dog refuses to go out because of the rain.

In that spirit of confusion, here's some whites and reds which can be flexible for a barbecue or can offer a hug as you stare at a summer downpour.

Whites for a summer's afternoon (sunny or not)

I POPPED over to a rainy garden festival where Villa Maria Wines was showcasing the very good eco-friendly work it is doing in its New Zealand vineyards to contribute to sustainability. As a bonus, it was also serving little tasters. Well, I couldn't say no.

Villa Maria Private Bin Riesling 2016 (£7.99 in a buy six price, or

RAISE A GLASS

WITH JANE CLARE

£10.49 per single bottle, Majestic, 12% abv) is a straw colour with floral notes of spring blossom and freesia, with pear apple and lime; the acidity is good and refreshing and it lifts along flavours of pineapple and juicy lime.

Villa Maria Private Bin Pinot Grigio 2016 (Waitrose, £10.99, 13% abv) has red apple on the nose, pear and stone fruit, and is soft and supple in the mouth with flavours of ripe apples and pears and a flash of cinnamon.

Villa Maria Cellar Selection

Sauvignon Blanc 2016 Marlborough (£8.61 in a buy-six price or £11.49 per single bottle, Majestic, 13% abv) This has reflections of gooseberries and sorrel together with good acidity. A friend said "it is quite winey". Enough said, you don't need me.

Two barbecue (or rainy day) reds

Santa Rita National Gallery Series Pinot Noir 2016 (£8.50, Sainsbury's 13.5% abv) is one of a special release of wines from Chilean wine producer Vina Santa Rita. The National Gallery wines (which also include sauvignon blanc, cabernet sauvignon, chardonnay and merlot) will use images from the gallery on their labels over the next three years.

The pinot noir label depicts Camille Pissarro's 'The Boulevard Montmartre at Night'.

This wine has aromas of fresh raspberries and strawberries squished into a summer pudding, with spice and vanilla taking the lead on the palate, with the fruit saying I'm here!! Don't forget me!! A percentage of the profits of each bottle will go to the National Gallery.

Domaine Jones Grenache Noir 2014 Côtes Catalanes

(£12.50, The Wine Society 14.5% abv) Rich plums and hedgerow fruit can deliver a cuddle if the weather turns.

The wine adds in a shake of spice, a grip of tannin and oh, if I must contribute I'll cook a steak with a peppery sauce (no cream, mind).

IN this day of craft gins and all kinds of hullabaloo around the gin industry then perhaps Greenall's Gin has felt the time is right to shout about its roots.

Greenall's Gin (RRP £21 a litre, widely available) was created by Thomas Dakin in 1761 and the brand has now released a new bottle inspired by those available 250 years ago. It has 1761 embossed on the neck, together with a Greenall's crest.

If you serve the gin simply with two slices of lime, and tonic, and lots of ice, then what's not to like.

■ EMAIL me jane@onefootinthegrapes.co.uk

INGREDIENTS:
For the garlic and ginger paste:
(makes 15 generous tbsp)
150g garlic, chopped;
150g ginger, peeled and chopped

For the garam masala (makes 18tbsp)

6tbsp coriander seeds;
6tbsp cumin seeds;
5tbsp black peppercorns;
4tbsp fennel seeds; 3tsp cloves; 7.5cm piece of cinnamon stick or cassia bark; 5 dried cassia leaves (also known as Indian bay leaves, available from Amazon); 20 green cardamom pods, lightly bruised; 2 large pieces of mace (available from Sainsbury's)

METHOD:

- 1. For the garam masala: Dry roast the spices over a medium-high heat until warm to the touch and fragrant, moving them around in the pan. If they begin to smoke, take them off the heat.
- 2. Tip the warm spices onto a plate and leave to cool, then grind to a fine powder in a spice grinder or pestle and mortar. Store in an airtight container in a cool, dark place and use within two months for optimal flavour.
- 3. To make the garlic and ginger paste: Place the garlic and ginger in a food processor or pestle and mortar and blend with just enough water to make a smooth paste. Store in an airtight container in the fridge for up to three days and use as needed or freeze in ice cube trays.

TASTE ESSENTIALS

GARLIC & GINGER PASTE
GRARAM MASALA

INGREDIENTS (Serves 4 as a side or 2 as a main)

2tbsp coconut or rapeseed oil; 1tsp cumin seeds; 10 fresh or frozen curry leaves (available from good supermarkets); 1 onion, finely chopped; 1-3 green chillies, to taste; A pinch of turmeric; 1tsp nigella seeds (available from most supermarkets); 2tbsp garlic and ginger paste (see panel left); 20 cherry tomatoes, halved; 2 large pre-cooked potatoes and 200ml of their cooking stock (see below); 200g fresh baby leaf spinach, blanched for 30 seconds, roughly chopped; 1tsp garam masala (see left) Salt and freshly ground pepper

For the pre-cooked potatoes:

2tbsp rapeseed oil; 1tbsp ghee (available from good supermarkets); 1tsp brown mustard seeds; 1tbsp cumin seeds; 3in piece of cinnamon stick or cassia bark; 5 green cardamom pods, lightly bruised; 3 large onions, finely sliced; 2tbsp garlic and ginger paste; 1 x 400g tin chopped tomatoes; 1tbsp Kashmiri mild chilli powder (available from Amazon); 1tsp ground turmeric; 500g potatoes, peeled and each cut into three; 650ml water; 1tbsp garam masala; salt and freshly ground pepper

METHOD:

- 1. For the potatoes: heat the oil and ghee over a high heat in a large saucepan, then throw in the mustard seeds. When they begin to pop, reduce the heat to medium-high and toss in the cumin seeds, cinnamon stick and cardamom pods, and temper (flavour) in the oil for a further 30 seconds.

- 2. Stir in the onions and fry for about five minutes until soft and translucent, stirring regularly, then add the garlic and ginger paste and let it sizzle in the oil for about one minute. Tip in the tomatoes, chilli powder and turmeric, and stir well.
- 3. Add the potato pieces and cover with the water. Cover and simmer until the potatoes are soft and cooked through (about 30 minutes). Sprinkle with the garam masala and salt and pepper to taste, and give it all

- 4. For the saag aloo, heat the oil in a large wok or frying pan over medium-high heat. When it begins to bubble, add the cumin seeds and allow to sizzle until fragrant. About 30 seconds should do.
- 5. Add the curry leaves followed by the chopped onion, green chillies, turmeric and nigella seeds and continue frying until the onion is soft and translucent. Stir in the garlic and ginger paste.
- 6. Add the cherry tomatoes and mix well. Then, add the pre-cooked potatoes and their cooking stock and simmer for a few minutes until the sauce has thickened and the potatoes are heated through. Stir in the chopped spinach.
- 7. Simmer for another minute or so until you are happy with the consistency.
- 8. Sprinkle the garam masala over the top and season with salt and pepper to taste.

LAND OF FIRE AND ICE

VOLCANOES, HORSE RIDES AND GEOTHERMAL BATHS - ERIN CARDIFF FINDS OUT WHY ICELAND IS IDEAL FOR A WELLBEING HOLIDAY

THERE is a word in Icelandic – gluggaveður – that literally translates as window weather. You know, the type that's bracingly cold to be out in but comforting to watch from behind a pane?

I think about it as I sit in the glass-fronted Northern Lights Bar of ION Adventure Hotel – an hour out of Reykjavik – looking out at the almost lunar landscape.

Sure enough, a feeling of cosy contentment washes over me and in that moment, I know that when it comes to wellness breaks, there's no better destination than Iceland.

Though Reykjavik – the country's capital – is only a three-hour flight from London Gatwick, it may as well be a different world. The remarkably flat landscape stretches for miles in every direction.

It's barren without being boring. And being somewhere so vast is oddly calming.

With so much natural beauty on offer, the perfect way to unwind in Iceland is to spend some time in the great outdoors – or several hundred metres beneath it.

I drive half an hour out of Reykjavik to embark on the world-famous Inside the Volcano tour. It starts with a 3km trek across a lava field, and with thick fog hanging in the air, I can't even see the dormant Thrihnukagigur volcano until I'm mere metres away.

I'm attached to a rope and harness before climbing into the window-cleaner-style lift that takes me down to see the inner workings of the earth. After a six-minute descent, we're underground. Though it's still only 4°C, it's warmer down here and completely silent. Strategically placed lights illuminate the rich colours of the jagged rocks which were once magma.

I'm told by a guide that the chamber I stand in is roughly the size of three full basketball courts, and that the Statue of Liberty would comfortably fit here. This far below the world's surface, everyday stresses seem so far away.

One of the oldest and most unique breeds in the world, Icelandic horses are famed for their strength and stamina. Tour company Solhestar takes me on an hour-long ride through a cluster of craters in a 5,200-year-old lava field known locally as the Raudholar (Red Hills).

Our pace is slow and steady as we journey round winding paths and through shallow pools.

Even though we're right on the doorstep of the bustling capital, the serene landscape can't help but inspire a feeling of relaxation.

Of course, wellness isn't all about nourishing the mind. It's about the body, too.

Fridheimar, a family-run farm on the touristic Golden Circle route (which loops around some of Iceland's most stunning natural sights) has opened one of its four tomato greenhouses to the public. Rather than waste tomatoes they don't sell, they turn them into delicious dishes in an on-site restaurant.

Sat amongst vine leaves, I feast on soup, ravioli and tomato ice cream, washed down with a Healthy Mary made of green tomato, honey, ginger and lime.

As a vegetarian, I relish the novelty of being able to eat anything on the menu. Everything is fresh, simple and downright delicious.

No visit to Iceland is complete without a trip to the Blue Lagoon. Just 15 minutes from Keflavik airport, it's an ideal entry – or in my case, exit – point to the island. One of the country's top attractions, it hosts up to 4,000 people a day.

As I float in the 38°C waters, rich in natural minerals such as silica and sulphur, a complimentary mud mask smeared across my face, I reflect on my time in Iceland.

I think about Huldafolk, the mythical elfish creatures who many locals consider to be fact rather than folklore. I smile to myself as I realise that, after only a few days here, I believe a little more in magic, too.

HOT HOUSE

ATTRACTIVE OPTION FOR FAMILIES

This property would be an ideal home to start a family and would be a great home for many years to come. With no chain could this be the property to get you moving?

A family sized house offers a lot of space for an attractive price in a new Harlow development. Estate agents Guardian have made the three-bedroom property in Coalport Close their pick of the week with a £290,000 asking price.

Located in a quiet cul-de-sac, the end-of-terrace house is part of a desirable estate in the Church Langley development.

A Guardian spokesman said: "This end of terrace family home has lots of potential to be a fantastic family space.

"The house has areas that could be improved to suit your individual tastes."

The house also features a large conservatory, providing a great area for either a family dining room, games room for the kids, or just a nice spot to enjoy the sun.

There are also two parking spaces and the placement of the house means the garden is not overlooked by neighbours.

For inquiries please call 01279 635685 or email paul.andreotti@guardianresidential.com

Alternatively visit the Guardian shop in Adams House, Post Office Walk, Harlow, where they have been since 2001.

VERY FINE VINTAGE

A rare chance has arisen to buy a Victorian era villa close to the heart of Bishop's Stortford. Thornfield House, which was built in around 1889, is within walking distance of the town centre with its shopping facilities, Waitrose and excellent local schools.

The double fronted villa is on the market with Knight Frank for £1,295,000, but with five bedrooms and a large garden it isn't hard to see why it fetches its high price tag.

It keeps its period charm with its large rooms with high ceilings, original wooden flooring and picture rails.

The combined kitchen and breakfast room is more 2017 than 1889 and has granite and hardwood work surfaces for cooking and serving food and drinks.

The property has kept its original wooden flooring. For the wine fanatics there is a cellar which can be used to store their favourite vintages.

There are also five bedrooms on the first floor, three of which with en suite bathrooms and a family bathroom.

Although it keeps its historic feel there are parts of the house that have been modernised with up to date comforts.

There are also two gardens, one with paved terrace and summer house and the other with a lawn with a range of mature trees.

The house has a paved area with parking for two cars and has access to residents' permit parking on Thornfield Road.

YOUR HOME

Festival of lights

The BBC Radio 2 DJ and TV presenter opens the doors of her own home to show you how just a few lanterns, fairy lights and boho touches can create a Glastonbury-style vibe for your summer parties

Can't get a ticket – can't stand the mud or the crowds? No worries. Set the stage at home with festival decor, and a little help from Jo Whiley. A familiar face at all the major events on the festival calendar in her roles as DJ and TV presenter, she's opened the doors to her home to reveal that she loves living the style.

"Our house is literally party-central, where the door's always open. We're always either leading up to a festival, clearing up after a festival, or planning or having a party," says Jo.

The 51-year-old lives in a barn conversion in Northamptonshire with her music executive husband Steve Morton and their four children, India, 25, Jude, 18, Cassius, 16 and Coco, 8.

"Our kitchen's where everyone gets together and we have music on tap, with the radio or CDs playing, and people spontaneously sing, dance and perform – not necessarily very well."

Jo, who's teamed up with Hillarys homeware company, which specialises in blinds, shutters, curtains and carpets, to reveal how to bring festival style into your home, says:

"Sliding glass doors give an open, spacious feel.

"We've dressed them with thin, floaty voiles, which don't compromise the light, and dark grey curtains frame the view. For parties, I style them up with fairy and festoon lights, and hanging plants for an relaxed, outdoors-inside feel.

"Outside, if you think you might be short on seating space, source some old crates or ask a local farmer for hay bales and simply cover them with cool fabrics or rugs. Add cushions and beanbags for a slouching, lounging area."

LIGHTEN UP

"I love fairy lights – they make a home feel magical. Make your home come to life at night by displaying as many fairy lights, lanterns and candles as possible.

"Hang delicate strings or bigger festoons, anywhere, and wrap them around trees and tables or focal points. Ramp up the atmosphere with scented candles."

MAKE IT QUIRKY

"Decorate fences or walls with favourite band or concert posters. String colourful ribbons from chairs and trees and let summer breezes bring them to life.

"Introduce boho style with brightly patterned accessories – from cushions to wall hangings. Avoid anything matchy-matchy; this look is about personality.

"Throw in balloons and a glitter ball or two, if you happen to have one lying around, like we did in the garage. Making your own decorations is effective and fun to do with children. We created a huge Ziggy Stardust lightning bolt sign out of MDF. Think out-of-the-box and do what suits your style – anything goes at a festival."

LITTLE EXTRAS

"When you're planning an outdoor event, remember, everyone might end up inside if it rains. Cover a kitchen table with layers of different fabrics in clashing prints and use empty jam jars as tea-light holders.

"I use mismatched crockery and large Mason jars for drinks on tap. And a must-have for every festival table has to be giant marshmallows. A fire-pit, great for toasting them, adds a sense of midsummer-magic."

WHERE BOB DYLAN BROUGHT IT ALL BACK HOME

Bob Dylan last year finally accepted a Nobel Prize for Literature for his lyrics after going AWOL for several weeks.

Confused fans both celebrated and puzzled over why Mr Tambourine Man was so reluctant to get the gong. Dylan is not known for following the rules, of course. The Times They Are a-Changin' singer outraged his core folk fans in 1965 when he released singles and albums featuring electric guitars, and embraced rock and roll.

And so the Dylan story has continued, making several twists and turns over five decades including a relationship with singer Joan Baez, conversion to Christianity from Judaism and shifting some 100 million records.

It all started in 1960 when the still-struggling Dylan moved from Minnesota to New York and immersed himself in the city's creative and musical scene.

He played in Greenwich Village clubs and, after playing harmonica on fellow musician Carolyn Hester's third album, was offered a recording contract.

Dylan continued living in New York off and on, and for 14 years lived in a Harlem townhouse.

The property was built circa 1890 and is in New York's Striver's Row historic neighbourhood, a favourite with both politicians and artists.

Dylan's former home has four storeys, five bedrooms, three bathrooms, six fireplaces, a dining room, huge living room with a Juliette balcony and a library. It is currently on the market at $3.56 million. For more information visit TopTenRealEstateDeals.com

Rolling Stone guitarist Ronnie Wood would probably like to forget the two years he spent living at vertiginous Ruxley Tower in Surrey. It is where the then hard-partying rocker holed up after leaving his wife Jo for a young Russian-born waitress called Ekaterina Ivanova in 2008.

The relationship lasted for just 18 months during which the couple lived at the 157-year-old tower, which has a rooftop terrace with amazing views. Ivanova went on to spill a considerable number of beans about her time with the now 70-year-old Ronnie including claims about his penchant for partying. As well as playing the guitar and

The tower's owner restored the property and sold it in 2011. But it's now on the market again, this time for £2.25m. The extraordinary tower, which is the highest point in Surrey and featured in the 1962 cult movie The Loneliness of the Long-Distance Runner, houses five bedrooms and two reception rooms. Ruxley Tower boasts commanding views of the Surrey countryside from its stylish roof terrace, while the interior is a beautiful mix of contemporary and traditional decor

This gorgeous house is the home of a highly unusual twosome who were at the heart of UK's creative industry during the 1960s, and who have been responsible for the look of many celebrities, both past and present.

Watkins Farm belongs to photographer, hat maker and clothes designer James Wedge and his celebrity make-up partner Amanda Jackson-Sytner.

He is most famously responsible for Mick Jagger's white frock coat worn at 1969's infamous Stone in the Park free concert and is also a friend of several key UK fashion photographers including David Bailey and Terence Donovan.

James also used to have a shop on the Kings Road where "on Saturdays there always used to be a Rolling Stone and Marianne Faithful used to be there on a regular basis," he says.

Amanda has a starry client list including actress Helen Mirren.

This creative pair have for the past 27 years been holed up doing their thing in Sherborne, Dorset at Watkins Farm, which has a quintessentially Georgian symmetrical front façade and design, mixed in with contemporary features.

As well as five-bedrooms, three bathrooms and four-reception rooms, there's six acres of paddocks and woodland, a pond, outside buildings including a studio and garages and a two-bedroom holiday cottage.

At the back are some exquisite formal gardens. It's currently for sale at £1.45 million through agent Humberts (01935 812323).

This year it is 200 years since the death of author Jane Austen, whose novels have dominated English literature since they were published during the early 19th century.

Much of the writing for three of the books took place at Chawton Cottage, the home that Austen's brother Edward gave his mother and sisters within his Chawton House estate.

Between 1805 and 1817, Jane wrote three of her best-known novels - Mansfield Park, Emma and Persuasion - at the property.

A little piece of the Austen story in Chawton is available to rent at £4,000 a month. It's the stables that used to serve Chawton Cottage, which is now the Centre for the Study of Early Women's Writing and an Austen museum.

The stables were built during the 16th century but converted into a home during the 19th century, well after Austen's death.

It's a Grade II listed, eight-bedroom property available through agent Carter Jonas (01962 876838).

OZ RUGBY STAR KICKS OFF SALE

Among rugby fans the name Michael Lynagh is a legend, whichever national or local team they support.

He is a former Australian and Saracens fly-half who won 72 caps for the Wallabies before retiring in 1995 after 11 years with the team, which he captained for two years between 1993 and 1995.

His legendary status comes in part from holding the world record for points when he retired and also being a member of the 1984 Grand Slam winning Australian team.

After his rugby days were over, he went on to success in the business world and is currently head of US stock market Dow Jones outside the US while also commenting on matches for Sky Sports.

But in April 2012 he suffered a stroke. He went on to write a book about his experiences during which he temporarily lost his sight, called Blindsided. Published in 2015 it recounts his battle to recover, rehabilitate and regain his memory following the stroke.

Lynagh has for many years been based in West London to be close to Sky Studios, in a Regency seven-bedroom and seven-bathroom house with three floors, a beautiful stone terrace at the front of the property, modern kitchen extension at the back and a huge rear garden.

It is for sale through agent Knight Frank for over a million pounds.

YOUR GARDEN

With Diarmuid Gavin

Sowing the seeds of love

GREAT WAYS TO GET YOUR KIDS INTO THE WONDROUS WORLD OF GARDENING

With summer here it's a great time for families to spend some time together outdoors – and what better place to do this than a garden? There are plenty of fun projects, and what's more creative than growing something new?

While the weather's nice, it's the best time of year to get children interested in this healthy and productive hobby – so here are some suggestions...

Sow some seeds: It might seem a bit late in the growing season but there are some quick seed-to-maturity plants that can be planted directly outside now.

You'll need your seeds, of course, plus a bit of seed compost and some yoghurt cartons or plastic bottles cut in half with a few drainage holes.

Mustard and cress are the most obvious things to grow and they are still the most magical as they'll pop up within a week. You will only need some wet cotton wool placed in a container to provide the perfect growing environment for the seeds.

Sprinkle them on finely and leave in a warm, light place. Use a stencil to create animals or stars for brilliant seedling shapes.

Nasturtiums have big seeds that are easy to handle and germinate quickly to give colourful flowers in yellow, red and orange. And they're edible! Meanwhile, Nigella damascena, Love-in-a-Mist, is an old cottage garden favourite that will delight with its combination of ferny foliage and pretty blue flowers. Its easy germination will encourage budding gardeners.

Nasturtiums, left, bring quick colour and cress, right, is ready within a week

Working together in the garden is a great way to teach children about the wonders of nature

Sunflower seeds are perfect for kids because they are amazed that such a massive flower comes from one small seed. Why not organise a family competition to see who can grow the tallest?

Cut and come again lettuce is great for children to learn where food comes from while radish is another easy to grow crop which matures fast. If you sow them now, you could be harvesting them in around a month's time – a simple but rewarding activity for the children.

Carrots are another veg that will pique kids' interest with their multi-coloured produce. They're quite easy to grow from seed and the likes of 'Rainbow Mix' will create yellow, purple and red carrots!

Limnanthes is known as the poached egg plant as it has a bright egg yolk-coloured centre on a white background. Easy to grow, it's good for attracting beneficial insects as well.

Pumpkins will provide all you need for the next Halloween. It's a little late to start sowing these now as you'd normally start them off in April indoors, but as with many other veg and flowering plants, you can cheat by buying small seedlings in the garden centre. They are ready for outdoor planting now.

Succulents and cacti are all the rage at the moment and small plants can be picked up cheaply in lots of stores. Create a mini desert landscape with sand and add features from the toy box such as little cowboys or animals to spark their imagination.

Make a wormery. Wearing gardening gloves, create layers of soil and sand in a big jar. Find some worms in the garden, pop them in and add some veg peelings and old fruit. Put the lid on – punching a few holes in the top for aeration – and watch them do their magic work.

Section off an area of the garden for the children – let them take ownership and responsibility for their own patch. There are plenty of kid-size tools that will help to encourage them and are easier for little hands to use.

To stimulate an interest in gardening, just walk around with them pointing out fun things such as snapdragons, foxgloves, and tactile and soft plants such as stachys.

Get children to close their eyes and identify some of the wonderful smells in the herb garden such as mint, thyme, rosemary, lavender and lemon balm.

Crush Nepeta to release its fragrance, inhale the sweet smell of roses, watch a bee burrow into a flower for nectar and enjoy the delicious chocolate aroma from Cosmos atrosanguineus. Open their eyes to the wonder that is nature and the joy of outdoor life and it will be repaid for years to come.

Don't invite carrot fly onto your crop

■ Thin out carrot seedlings – remember to remove completely (and eat!) the thinnings as, if left, their scent will attract carrot fly. You can cover with horticultural mesh to keep carrot fly away.

■ Water containers, pots, window boxes and feed fortnightly.

■ Tie in climbing and rambling roses – the more you train them horizontally, the more this will encourage side shoots to develop and produce more flowers. Spray roses to protect against diseases.

JOBS FOR THE WEEK

■ Train sweet peas and start cutting flowers as they appear so you'll get more.

■ Plan for next spring – now's the time to start sowing seeds of Bellis perennis, polyanthus, pansies and wallflowers so they will be in flower (when very little else is) for brightening up the garden in late winter/early spring.

■ Tackle bindweed in the borders – remove by digging up every piece of white root or paint on weed killer (you don't want to kill other plants in the process by spraying wildly).

■ Soft fruit such as gooseberries need netting over them before the birds tuck in.

Make sure you don't leave carrot thinnings to rot or you may lose your whole crop

This 'poached egg' plant is easy to grow and will attract insects

ASK DIARMUID

Q I love roses and have many in my garden. Apart from blackspot, which is an ongoing problem, the flowers of some of my roses appear to be too heavy for the stems and break off.

I feed with Top Rose and dig in soil conditioner in the autumn but nothing seems to help.

Can you suggest a solution?

Carol Doust

A There are some roses that are bred to have drooping heads, for example climbers, viewed from below. But if yours are so heavy they are breaking off, that's not desirable.

The best way to increase vigour is through good annual pruning. This might help with blackspot as well - the healthier the rose, the better it will be at dealing with pests and diseases. So in late winter or early spring, get out those secateurs and make sure you don't hold back.

PLANT OF THE WEEK

MALVA 'PRIMLEY BLUE'

This jolly little shrub is in full flower at the moment and if you like blue flowers, this could be one for you. It's a prolific bloomer during summer, with lots of pale blue flowers with darker blue veins. It loves a sunny spot and would be ideal in a terracotta pot on a patio, where the bees and butterflies can come to visit.

SMOOTH AND STYLISH

By David Ward

While their dinky two-seater MX-5 continues to take all the headlines and plaudits, Mazda UK has quietly and more subtly been doing extremely well sales wise in the highly competitive compact SUV/Crossover with their CX-5 model since its first launch back in 2012.

It currently accounts for more than 20 per cent of their total UK annual sales and this is set to be further enhanced from June 30 when the second generation CX-5 arrives in dealer showrooms with again a choice of either diesel or petrol engines with prices starting at a competitive £25,695 for the former and £23,695 for the latter.

At first glance there might seem to little difference in looks to the original model but Mazda UK boss Jeremy Thomson declares: "There are three key areas of change we wanted to see – a slightly more stylish front end look, overall improvements in terms of comfort and refinement inside and lastly to make it much quieter to drive.

"All three have been achieved and there's all round new levels of sophistication and higher standard equipment levels while prices have only risen on average by between £200 and £900 compared to the outgoing models," he explains. "Crucially too we have been able to maintain our reputation of Mazda's love of driving with this new model with improved handling and less interior noise and vibration."

He went on: "We've had excellent residual values too on the first generation and expect that to be maintained on this new model with again an equal mix of both retail and fleet sales with the best selling version likely to be the 2WD Sport Nav manual (£28,695) and total sales for the rest of this year over 8,000."

The subtle styling changes show a nice slightly wider grille at the front and better headlights along with slimmer tail lights which overall gives the car a smarter and fresher up.

Interior wise again on initial inspection there may not appear to be too many changes but there are with far better all round quality, including soft-touch trim finishing with plenty of chrome on the dashboard and doors and the seats are more comfortable too.

The seven-inch infotainment screen is now free standing while the main instruments and controls are much the same as before but for the driver there's a new head-up display shown on the windscreen rather than the pop-up out of the top of the dashboard last time round making it much easier for the driver to use.

A minor improvement which will please many is that all interior storage pockets have been deepened to give more room so avoiding that niggle on the first version I encountered where bottles of water and the like kept falling out of them when on the move last time around!

The platform and wheelbase are unchanged as are the engines with the choice of a two-litre 148bhp petrol or a 2.2-litre turbocharged diesel with two outputs – 163bhp or 173bhp – with a choice of either a six-speed manual or automatic gearbox and again as before the AWD only being offered with the diesels.

Underneath Mazda claim this model has 15 per cent more torsional rigidity thanks to a revised chassis and a new torque vectoring system as already seen on the Mazda 3 and 6 and better overall stability is helped by the car sitting 35mm lower than the previous model.

To cut out the noise inside which some owners complained about on the original model Mazda engineers have added 50kg of sound deadening and on first drive it's clear that this has worked – the interior is so much quieter once on the move with hardly any noise intrusion from the engine or road surface.

The 2.2-litre AWD Sport Nav with automatic gear change is impressive on a first drive with good mid range acceleration when needed and decently smooth gearshifts up and down and with nicely weighted steering there's good, accurate turn-in for those twisty country bends and hardly any body roll to notice.

The car sits on 19-inch wheels which was okay but slightly better for a softer ride and excellent cruising then the SE-L Nav models sitting on 17-inch wheels is the answer in my book.

Either way and whatever model a driver chooses the overall ride and drive is much smoother and quieter and this latest CX-5 is all round better in crucial areas in terms of comfort and lower noise levels.

The more budget conscious buyer looking at the high levels of standard equipment on the SE-L Nav models won't be disappointed – it has much more on offer than before and includes an impressive list of privacy glass, LED headlights and fog lamps, front and rear parking sensors, heated auto power folding door mirrors, rain sensing front wipers and more.

TESTED: Mazda CX-5 2.2AWD Sport Nav Automatic

Membership Advisor

Full-time
Competitive salary, plus commission.

Harlow Leisurezone are seeking a full-time Membership Advisor to join the team at this busy, state of the art health and leisure centre in the heart of Harlow, Essex.

As a Membership Advisor you will play a vital role within our business. You will love meeting new people, have great listening skills and demonstrate the ability to build relationships. You will be self motivated, professional, energetic, have a positive attitude and be focused on encouraging the community to use the Centre.

In return the successful candidate will receive full training and guidance on the Centre's facilities and how to handle enquiries from prospective members.

Responsibilities include:

- Showing potential members around our facilities, answering questions and providing information on the types of memberships on offer;
- Using your enthusiasm and knowledge, alongside the information provided, to sign up these potential members into actual members;
- Dealing with new membership enquiries via phone, e-mail and walk in;
- Taking a proactive approach to generating new business, including cold-calling and outreach;
- Following up on leads and referrals to generate new prospects and appointments within the local residential and business community;
- Assisting in running promotions and sales initiatives to positively influence individuals of all ages and backgrounds, to sign up for a healthy lifestyle.

If you feel you have the skills, enthusiasm and focus we are looking for, we would love to hear from you.

For more information on this role, and to apply for this position, please email your CV and covering letter outlining why you would be best suited to fulfil this role to: careers@harlowleisurezone.co.uk. Alternatively, you can access an application form online at www.harlowleisurezone.co.uk.

Who murdered Evelyn Foster?

In 1931, off a remote Northumberland road, flames rose up into the night. Beyond anyone's help, Evelyn Foster lay near her burning car – herself engulfed in flames. With her last breath she described her assailant: a mysterious man with a bowler hat.

Nearly 90 years after her murder the case remained unsolved. With unprecedented access to the police files has crime writer, Diane Janes, finally tracked the killer down?

Andalucia's Eastern Coast - Granada & Almeria

8 days from £579 Flying direct from Luton & Stansted
Selected dates Sep, Oct, Nov 2017, Feb & Mar 2018

On this holiday, not only will you visit Spain's greatest palace, the Alhambra in Granada, but also the Moorish fortress city of Almeria. Your base is the coastal city of Almunecar. The wonderful sub-tropical climate will help you enjoy the city's rich artistic and cultural heritage. In and around Almunecar the sierras plunge spectacularly into the sea and you will find no less than 25 beaches and coves within its boundary.

Tour highlights

- ✓ Return direct flights from Luton & Stansted
- ✓ 7 nights 4* HB accommodation on the coast in Taramay, Almunecar
- ✓ Included excursion to Granada and the Alhambra
- ✓ Included excursion to Almeria
- ✓ Optional excursion at extra cost to Frigiliana
- ✓ Option to extend your holiday by another week
- ✓ Services of a tour representative

Bordighera - the Italian Riviera & Monte Carlo

8 days from £799 Flying direct from Luton & Stansted
Departs Sep 11, 18, 25 & Oct 2 2017

The sun-seeking British of the 19th century left their mark all along the Riviera but perhaps nowhere more so than in the Italian town of Bordighera - famous for its perfect climate, seafront promenade, and palm trees. Just a few miles along the coast we find two more popular British haunts - Monte Carlo and Nice.

Tour highlights

- ✓ Return direct flights from Luton & Stansted
- ✓ 7 nights HB in Bordighera
- ✓ Excursions to Taggia and San Remo; Monte Carlo and Dolceacqua
- ✓ Walking tour of Bordighera
- ✓ A free 1 hour session in the hotel's wellness centre
- ✓ Services of a local representative

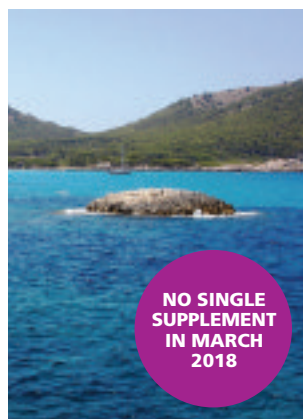

Isla Canela, Rio Tinto & the Guadiana River

8 days from £759 Flying direct from Luton & Stansted
Departs Sep 7, 14 & 28 2017

This holiday has the perfect balance of relaxation beside the dunes along Spain's Atlantic coast and on the banks of the Guadiana river and scenic sightseeing jam-packed with historical and cultural interest. You will visit the beautiful coastline of the Donana Natural Park, enjoy the Columbus sites and the scenery of the British Rio Tinto mines and have a day on a boat sailing up the River Guadiana.

Tour highlights

- ✓ Return direct flights from Luton & Stansted
- ✓ 7 nights HB in a 4* hotel on Isla Canela
- ✓ One included spa entrance, full day excursions to the Rio Tinto mines with train ride and to the Columbus sites and El Rocío, boat cruise on the Guadiana River
- ✓ Services of a tour representative

Walking - Mallorca

8 days from £649
Flying direct from Luton & Stansted
Departs Sep 28, Oct 5 2017 & Mar 3 2018

A holiday allowing you to appreciate the real beauty of the northern part of the island at your own pace. A world away from the busy resorts in the south, there is a choice of escorted walks throughout the week right on your own doorstep - for your hotel is the excellent 4 star Bella Playa on the edge of Cala Ratjada and the Levante National Park and a few metres from the breathtaking beach of Calla Agulla.

Tour highlights

- ✓ Return direct flights from Luton & Stansted
- ✓ 7 nights HB accommodation in the 4* Bella Playa Hotel
- ✓ 7 nights holiday extension option
- ✓ Choice of fully guided walks
- ✓ Services of a tour representative

Harlow's Kitson flies flag for GB at European Champs

HARLOW Running Club member Andrew Kitson had the honour of representing Great Britain in the Aquathlon European Championships in Bratislava, Slovakia, finishing in a very respectable eighth place.

The aquathlon is a two discipline event which involves a 1km swim and then a 5k run. Competing in the M40-44, Kitson completed the event in a time of 35min 48sec.

Kitson, who was sponsored for the event by Mike Varney Physiotherapy, said: "I'm probably still up on cloud 10 or 11 at the moment. I genuinely went with the hope of not being last as I didn't want to be seen to have merely made up the numbers. "When I heard that I'd finished in the top half of the British contingent and eighth overall I was ecstatic and I'm already looking at whether I can fund entries to the world or European championships next year."

Training for the event consisted of street running and plenty of swimming at Harlow Leisurezone with Harlow Running Club and their triathlon section.

Kitson added: "I'd like to thank Mike Varney for his support in helping me stay free from injury and I'd also like to thank my family and friends for being so supportive over the last few months.

"It's pretty amazing. I think when you are in your 40s you do not expect this is the point that you get to represent your country."

Kiani makes hay in sun

HARLOW were made to work hard to keep up their unbeaten record in Shepherd Neame Essex League Division One as they overcame Gidea Park and Romford on Saturday.

Batting first, Harlow initially got off to a slow start with the usually prolific Alan Jones (11) out cheaply.

But fellow opener Hafiz Afzal posted yet another half century to bring his aggregate for the season to more than 600 runs.

Aby assisted by skipper Rehman Ahmed (31) and Ahmed Khawaja (61) a good foundation was laid.

Top scorer Ubaid Kiani batted very well for his 73, while cameos from Australian Mitch Howarde (26) and Andre Riddell (16) saw the visitors post 302-6 wickets after 50 overs.

Defending the large total almost proved too much for the Harlow bowlers, and with the score at one stage at 246-3, it appeared that they would taste defeat for the first time.

However dogged bowling and fielding – including three run outs – kept the hosts seven runs short of the total, with Mustanser Meraj taking 2-47.

■ AT a sun drenched Marigolds, Harlow treated the sizeable crowd to a hugely entertaining Essex League T20 match against Premier side Ilford on Tuesday.

Batting first, Harlow amassed a mammoth 196 with 16-year-old Alan Jones smashing 97 – including an audacious switch hit for six – while Ahmed hit a swashbuckling 64.

Replying the visitors were dismissed with one over to spare for 112, with Adnan Farooq grabbing 3-15.

Town triumph to go second

HARLOW Town enjoyed an emphatic seven-wicket win over Epping to move into second place in Shepherd Neame Essex League, Division Three.

Epping, having won the toss and elected to bat, soon found themselves two wickets down, with Jay Pathak inducing edges from openers Marc Meyer-Webb and Salim Mithani.

The first saw a diving Ronnie Yates parry the ball, but the eager hands of Neil Gladwin at first slip rescued the situation. Then Mithani departed, Yates making no mistake this time.

Epping consolidated, with Leo Dolan (38), leading the rally, but with the score on 50 he was cleaned up by Jack Elston.

The score progressed to 84, then a mix up saw Ramiz Miah run out as Gladwin, backing up a wayward throw, caught the ball, ran in to remove the bats.

Epping were eventually all out for 181 in 48 overs.

The home side's bowlers shared the wickets with Pathak taking 2-33, Farmer 3-33 and Elston 2-29.

Replying, an early setback saw Dan Baldwin depart for 6.

Ash Alderson was joined by Joe Holland, taking the score to 45 before Alderson went for 13.

But Holland was looking good, and when he was joined by Gladwin the pair took total command.

Holland (76) showed some delightful stroke play and Gladwin continuing his recent roll as the rock of the side, as they took the score to 142.

Gladwin (56 not out) and skipper Scott Alderson (10 not out) took Town to 182-3, overhauling the target in 26 overs.

Passmores go for glory in national futsal finals

PASSMORES Academy's Year 9 boys' futsal team have racked up an impressive performance by beating five club sides to win the Eastern Region Futsal Championship.

The Harlow team, consisting of keeper Alfie Ley, Ronnie Edwards, Rowan Dorling, Lennie Simkins, Jack Winstone and Harrison Leathers, showed what they are made of by winning the championship, held at the Copperbox Arena in the Queen Elizabeth II Olympic Park, Stratford.

The boys were the only school team to qualify, and were up against the best club teams from counties across the Eastern Region.

A convincing and determined display ensured Passmores won four games, drawing the fifth, achieving a goal difference of plus nine. This meant the boys maintained their unbeaten record and have now qualified for the national finals in Birmingham this weekend, where they will compete against the top teams from across the country.

Team captain Dorling said: "At the start of the tournament we were nervous and didn't play as we normally would.

"But then we became more confident and played as a team who wanted to win.

"We've worked hard to get to the national finals, and we are going to make sure we are prepared and play even better than we did at the regionals."

The team's latest triumph comes after a string of successes in futsal tournaments against school and club teams from north and mid Essex, which included a decisive 12-1 victory against Sandon School.

Following that, they qualified for the U14 Essex finals, where they were undefeated and crowned Essex champions.

Team coach, Gareth Walsh, who was supported by Neil Gladwin, said: "The boys' effort and determination is in evidence not just when playing but also in training.

"This has culminated in them being the first team from our school to reach a national final.

"Their desire and hunger to battle back against the best in the region shows the character of the team.

"Congratulations to the boys – the whole school will be behind you wishing you continued success and good luck at the national finals."
